FOR FREE PARTICIPATION IN THE JOY ZONE

With a fine display of fireworks in the evening and a period of free dancing at the Benbough pavilion, preceded by an offer of free bathing suits during the day, the summer season at Ocean Beach will be ushered in tomorrow, Sunday, May 24, with unstinted enthusiasm along the joy zone. The celebration will be marked by enjoyable carnival entertainments and everybody is invited to join in the general good time to be afforded by the amusement purveyors at this popular playground by the seashore. Come and bring the family and your neighbors for a day of fun and recreation.

First Poetic Eulogy of Ocean Beach

"LOMA LORE"

By WINIFRED DAVIDSON

Point Loma, California

Book rights reserved.

The Union of October 27, 1878, contains a poem by Mary Evelyn Francisco, which reveals somewhat of the charm of Ocean Beach forty-seven years ago. Our modern poets may hope to find more modern forms of expression for the emotions aroused by the "bounding, beaming billow," but at least the sense of wonder lingers with us undissipated by the enthusiastic admiration of the countless thousands who have gazed seaward here since Mary Evelyn's time. This is the first poetical celebration of Ocean Beach—as Ocean Beach—that I have discovered. We may let it close this chapter, fittingly, I believe, because in color and tone, in theme and point of attack, it typifies what was on Loma in 1878

ON THE OCEAN BEACH

I gaze in rapturous wonder on the beauties of the deep,
I list to the roll and thunder of the waves that never sleep;
I see them follow, follow each other in their course
As they rise with angry menace and subside with feathery force.
O, blest the feverish sands as they meet the cool embrace
Of the bounding, beaming billow, kissing off its burning face.
I grasp thy treasures, flung so recklessly on the shore;
The beauties of the sea-moss, I'll forget them never more.
Their delicate form and color, as I hold them in my hand,
Inspire my soul to wonder—came they from a magic land;
Murmuring waves, have ye a language, that could I comprehend,
Would tell me of a beautiful, a strange and wondrous land?
Made up of rocks, and shells, and caves, hung in and o'er
With rarest mosses, precious stones, fit only for artistic lore,
Must I wonder, never knowing, ever wonder
What the mysteries lying hidden 'neath thy din or roll and thunder?
Must I wonder, ever wonder on thy shell-strewn margin only?
Ill rewarded vision, prying into depths o'er depths so lonely,
Would that some mighty power would bear thy ocean form away,
That I might wander o'er thy plains for but a single day,
Or, that by magic word from some enchanted world,
Aloft on either side, thy surging mass be hurled.
I'd walk between thy walls of water green and foam;
Until I'd learned thy mysteries, with searching gaze I'd roam.

VERDICT ON THE HINDE WILL

In the case of the suit to break the will of Dr. Alfred Hinde, a jury this week decided in favor of the nieces and nephews of the deceased and against Arthur Diedrichson, to whom the estate, valued at approximately $100,000, had been left. An appeal will be taken probably to a higher court.

OUR OWN WINIFRED

TERSELY TELLS OF HER TRIP
AMONG ADVERTISERS

Have you ever penetrated into the offices, studies, behind the counters, beside the kitchen stoves of your fellowmen and sister women, offering advertising rates in the greatest little weekly ever disseminated among intelligent seekers after the right goods and knowledge of the places where to get 'em?

If not, why? Oh, you who would know the heart beats of the people, take a bunch of contracts under your arm and go forth to sell charms.

People who have wares to dispose of know the world and its coy, coy shyness. They would overcome it. They would lure. They would draw the world, purse jingling, within those offices, those studies, to the purchasing side of those shining counters, to the cool lunch tables served by those hot kitchen stoves, and they look to you and your joy-brimmed weekly to say for them the magic word.

"Hey, missis! Right in here. I got something to put in your paper!" It is a merry sound.

Good luck to the advertisers in "The Beach News," every one! —Hey Missis.

At Last! Cabrillo Honored

JUAN CABRILLO

First from old Spain you came, brave Portuguese, Cabrillo! And the ship San Salvador
Made port where never such craft sailed before
Here at Point Loma. Up from far southern seas
You came with white wings blowing, just as these
Our timid wings blow big here near this shore
Today. You came, you went. Now evermore
Your name, Cabrillo, rides our western breeze.
Proud navigator of the olden ways,
Bold son of seamen of that Portugal
Whose sailors knew all lands in golden days
When every land was distant! Here you shall Stand forth in sunshine of this farthest West
While skies burn blue, while lifts high Loma's crest.

DISCOVERY OF POINT LOMA

"The sky was probably cloudless that day, September 28, 1542, when the Portuguese gentleman, Estevan, called also Juan Cabrillo, commanding two light, round, old-fashioned galley-rigged ships, the "Victoria" and "San Salvador," made first Table Mountain, then Coronado Islands, finally raising this headland now called Point Loma,—the 'hill point.'"

MAGNIFICENT MONUMENT

PLANNED FOR POINT LOMA

BY NATIVE SONS

At the annual convention of the Native Sons of the Golden West held at Arrowhead Lake last week a fight was put through the grand parlor that will go down in history. A monument to Juan Cabrillo, discoverer of Point Loma (which he marked on his map as California!) to cost no less than $100,000 will arise on that spot set aside by the government during 1915-16 at the instigation of the Order of Panama, now defunct.

Dan Shaffer, chairman of the landmarks committee of the local parlor 108 and Phil Swing, congressman from this district, have long been at work upon this proposition, which has also been the dream of all old residents of the bay side of Point Loma; but though the matter has come up again and again, the right time had not come until last week. Dan could not attend the convention, but there went to Arrowhead as delegates from the local parlor, Albert V. Mayrhofer, deputy grand president for this district, Wilbur Kelley, president and Edward Dowell, 3rd vice president of the local parlor, and our Point Loma enthusiast, Edgar F. Hastings, past president here.

This San Diego delegation presented to the grand parlor a resolution that was printed in the advance report requesting an appropriation of $10,000 as a nucleus of a fund to be started towards the erection of the long-needed monument to the discoverer of the state.

M. B. Chamber of Commerce

A most enthusiastic meeting was held Tuesday evening at Shirley cottage, by the Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce. Fully 200 people attentively listened to the favorable reports issued by the executive committee on public welfare.

Everything in the line of conveniences and beauty seem to be coming our way, through the persistent efforts of those selected to put Mission Beach on the World Map.

The wonderful "Hollywood" design—in street lamps was selected. The contract to be let to the Union Metal Corp., for Union Metal standards of steel and copper, 16 feet in height.

A guarantee of twenty years covering all points is given with our contract. Mr. Palmer was asked to select a committee to look over the pavement contract; advising the people as to the merits of workmanship given, etc.

The question of Fire Protection came up. Chief Louis Almgren assuring us through letter of his cooperation, and suggesting a few fire plugs evenly distributed throughout the beach. Judge Chas. B. DeLong suggested also for a temporary convenience and safety, that all home owners provide themselves with a stout 1-inch hose 50 feet in length, that with our heavy water pressure here would combat any fire and be at hand for emergencies in all sections of the tract.

Many of the tall unsightly poles in use by the telephone and electric company will be removed.

A protection of policing has been given by Chief Patrick assuring us of from two to four motorcycle cops to patrol the beach, according to necessity in handling the crowds expected and citizens of our community are speaking for the services of Mr. Wm. Crookham, continuing his good services as heretofore, as special night-watchman.

Life savers have been selected, and the cleaning of the beach is provided for. Large signs will be placed at the North and South entrance to beach directing the traffic for park-

MME. KATHERINE TINGLEY
ABLY PORTRAYS THE BEAUTIES OF "PORT ORIENT"

In a recently published essay typifying San Diego as the "Athens of America," Mme. Katherine Tingley most delightfully describes the irresistible beauty and wonderful possibilities of "Port Orient," a name long ago originally suggested by her for the city of San Diego. What could be said more truthfully and prettily than these excerpts from her gifted pen:

"There can be but few cities in the length and breadth of this old world of ours which possess greater advantages in the way of natural beauty and climate than does San Diego—a city which fronts one of the bluest bodies of water to be found anywhere, which is sheltered to the north and west by the long and lofty promontory of Point Loma and behind which is range upon range of mountains in every shade of purple and gold and dominating them all the bold and glorious outlines of Cuyamaca and San Miguel. It is a picture, as seen from Point Loma across the bay, that one does not soon forget. Add to all this a climate nearly all spring and sunshine, the advantage of being the nearest American port to the Panama canal, the only natural harbor south of San Francisco and one obtains a prospect surely as rosy as any city could desire to possess."

"California ought to be the mecca of the world. Westward the course of empire and civilization has been passing for many centuries, from the ancient cities of the Orient, through Europe and across to the American continent, to find here in our Golden State no possibility of going further on this coast."

"By this sea, blue as the Aegean, in this climate of perpetual spring, conditions are in every way suitable for the ripening of a higher type of humanity and a more perfect expression than has been evolved in historical times."

Our Souvenir Edition May 30

Pursuing its established policy of promoting the prosperity of Mission Beach, Ocean Beach, Pacific Beach and Point Loma, "The Beach News" will issue a big souvenir edition next Saturday, May 30, in recognition of the inauguration of the Mission Beach Amusement Center.

The formal opening on Decoration Day of San Diego's new seaside resort will attract thousands upon thousands from up the coast and from all nearby states and the valley country, arrangements having been made for excursions from many points.

This great influx of holiday visitors will undoubtedly prove of incalculable benefit to the entire beach district from Torrey Pines to the very tip of the Point Loma peninsula.

And you're just in time to tell 'em all about who you are where you are and what you're doing through a special display announcement in our big souvenir edition.

The issue will be a boost for the whole beach section, all sharing in the resultant prosperity either directly or indirectly.

Don't watch our beaches grow—grow with them!

THE MAN WHO DID THINGS TWICE

By DON MARK LEMON

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

OF COMMANDING figure and soldierly bearing, with deep-set gray eyes, hollow, cadaverous cheeks, and mustache and hair an intense blue black, his singular personality alone had anywhere and at all times attracted special attention to the man; but coupled with this distinguished personality, and singling him out as remarkable in the highest degree, was the fact that he lived in duplicate.

Thus—if on Monday he arose early, breakfasted on coffee, toast, and eggs, afterwards retired to his rooms to occupy himself until noon at his desk; then, after partaking of lunch, quit his rooms to ramble about the city, giving alms to the old blind organ woman, going up and down particular streets and through particular quarters, thence back to his hotel, to his dinner, to his desk after dinner, and finally to bed—on Tuesday he would go through precisely the same regime; arising early, breakfasting on coffee, toast, and eggs; afterwards retiring to his desk, thence to lunch, to his rambles up and down those particular streets and through those particular quarters that he had visited on Monday, giving alms to the old blind organ woman; thence back to his hotel, to dinner, to his desk and papers; finally to bed.

On Wednesday he perhaps would spend the day quite differently, arising late, going out on horseback for the entire day, attending the theater at night, and to bed at midnight or later; but howsoever he spent Wednesday, Thursday—or the day following—was sure to be a repetition down to the smallest detail.

Friday would see commenced a new series of action for Saturday to duplicate.

That this man should deliberately go about living as if his soul were a stereoscope, and life, to be appreciated, must be like the stereoscopic picture, double, was generally considered an astonishing thing; and, besides, it seemed such a reprehensible waste of energy, time and money.

To fall from his horse upon a Wednesday at a particular crossing, bruising his body and spraining his wrist was bad enough; but to repeat the accident at that particular crossing upon the following day was a pure waste of energy. To lose a half-hour on Friday by coming down to the depot too early was perhaps an error of calculation; but to repeat the action on the following Saturday was a waste of time. To visit his tailor on Monday and order a new suit of clothing was nothing reprehensible; but to drop in on the following day at precisely the same minute and order a similar suit of clothing could be nothing less than a waste of money.

It was this trait of duplicating all his expenditures that had first attracted attention to the man's singular character. And, indeed, one who coolly and voluntarily paid all his bills twice over was certain, sooner or later, to have minute notice taken of himself and his comings and goings.

It may have been that the man's mind was divided, one half acting normally and consistently, whilst the other half drove him each alternate day to imitate his conduct of the preceding day, as a little impish boy imitates the actions of one going before him in the street. Or perhaps he was merely eccentric. But there seemed something more than eccentricity in his conduct when, upon a certain Saturday, he deliberately returned and allowed a vicious dog to bite him in the manner that it had bit him some twenty-four hours before. Such conduct could arise from nothing less than methodical madness.

Living his own life in his own reserved way, cultured and studious, troubling no one, offending none; doubly liberal in his expenditures and never pressed for means, steadfast in his chosen eccentricity—if such it were—and in his face and manner no questioning doubt of himself, perhaps in time Henry Hobart had been accepted like any other man, the curious had ceased to be curious, and his mysterious character, without any further or deeper scrutiny, had become one of the mysteries of human life, had not the man been suddenly struck down as by an invisible hand and the appalling mystery of his death heightened tenfold the mystery of his life.

On a Tuesday morning, at fifteen minutes of ten o'clock, an attendant was summoned by the call-bell to room 63 of the Sumner house, and upon obeying the call found Henry Hobart struggling in the throes of a strange and unnatural death.

The Man Who Did Things Twice, half-dressed, standing in the center of his outer room, was battling with the invisible air about him for breath, or, as the attendant put it later, "Like he was fightin' with something that weren't there."

The hotel was aroused, Doctor Thiel was hastily summoned from his office on the next floor, and everything was done that science could suggest or despair persuade, yet in less than ten minutes Henry Hobart lay dead on the floor, within his stilled brain hidden the profound mystery of his life, and still echoing in the death room his one strangled cry ere death sealed his blue lips—Tomorrow!

It was a strange case, a questionable case, a frightful case, but beyond all it proved a baffling case, for the police came, removed the body to the morgue, intimating death by poison or other foul play, and examined the rooms and overhauled the possessions of the dead man, but who the deceased was, who his kindred or what his former residence, or the cause of his death, they could not discover. The scholarly tomes that filled his shelves bore no signatures or book-marks, and private papers of any kind there were none. The autopsy made the same day—afternoon—upon the body of the deceased failed to discover any poison, and Doctor Thiel's belief that the man had been strangled seemed without support, as no foreign substance or growth of any kind was found in the windpipe or air passages.

Nevertheless, Doctor Thiel was firm and blunt: "The man was strangled," he maintained. "Make the best of that, gentlemen, and then go to your dinners."

One thing only seemed certain, one thing only was undisputed—The Man Who Did Things Twice, with severed windpipe and autopsy-marred body, would not duplicate his own death upon the morrow. He had come to his death on a Tuesday, a Tuesday with which—he had lived—he would have begun a new course of action to be duplicated on Wednesday. But he had died, and now for once The Man Who Did Things Twice would fail in his eccentricity. Perhaps for that his spirit would be troubled.

Next morning, while the attendant who had been first on the death scene of the previous day was holding forth at length on the tragedy with certain servant cronies, the call-bell suddenly rang and the hand of the call dial spun around and pointed to No. 63.

The man hastened to obey the summons, not noticing that the hands of the hall clock pointed to fifteen minutes of ten, nor delaying to recollect what guest occupied room 63. The tragedy of the preceding day had been the event of his life, and he had not as yet descended to the trifles of his daily routine.

As he tapped briskly at the door of room 63 and put his hand upon the knob to enter, it suddenly came over him that he had done precisely such a thing before. That at about that time of some other morning he had been summoned by the call-bell to room 63—had knocked, turned the knob, entered—and—a loud cry, a shout thick with horror, broke from the man's lips, and he reeled back into the hallway.

There before him, in the center of the fateful room, half-dressed, battling with the invisible air, with blue lips and protruding eyes, stood The Man Who Did Things Twice.

The ominous, ghostly hush that followed the frightened attendant's cry was quickly broken by the hurry of many feet, and soon again the hotel was aroused and again Doctor Thiel bent over the prostrate and dying Henry Hobart.

Outside and distantly could be heard the clang of the fire bells, but in the room of death all was sudden silence, all were hushed by the frightful, ghostly thought that the scene before them had been enacted before—the dying man with his discolored face and struggling hands, the physician bending over him, the alarmed, pitying faces of the gathered guests, and the frightened servants huddled in the background. And the man must die as he had died!

They looked on, and waited. Then the end came, and Doctor Thiel, arising, said, "He is dead!" He had uttered those words once before and under like conditions. And the guests and the servants spoke together in horrified whispers, as they had done before; then the assembly broke up and the hallway was cleared, as before!

There was something immeasurably painful about it all, to live a thing over in that frightful way, to be, as it were, mere puppets at a show, and one day to be to another day as a reflection in a mirror.

For a time those who had witnessed both tragedies seemed to live in a kind of trance, and moved about and whispered together like being in a dream; but finally the natural reassured itself, and then curiosity seized them.

What was the meaning of it? Henry Hobart had died and his body had been mutilated by the surgeon's knife. How, then, had he died a second time and his body shown no marks of the knife? Had they been deceived by a ghost? No; there in room 63 lay the dead man—flesh and blood—and seven blocks away, resting on a marble slab, with the water dripping continually on it, lay the other body of Henry Hobart—The Man Who Did Things Twice.

A sudden doubt came into the mind of Doctor Thiel, a misgiving that frightened him. Was that other body—that autopsy-marred body—still resting quietly on its slab at the morgue? Or—

Hastily quitting the hotel, he hurried towards the morgue, and suddenly came up against an insurmountable blank wall of mystery. The morgue was a heap of charred ruin and smoldering, steaming ashes, and if the autopsy-marred body of Henry Hobart had been lying on its slab during the period of the fire, then it had been totally consumed, and that other body up at the hotel was that of a second Henry Hobart; but, if the autopsy-marred body of Henry Hobart had not been lying quietly on its slab during the raging of the fire, then, in God's name, who and what was he who had died up at the Sumner house that morning?

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and inclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

How to build up your Weight

TO BE under weight often proves low fighting-power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve-power, minus red-cells in your blood, minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red-blood-cells, you begin to become plus. That's why S. S. S., since 1826, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, a plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, firmer, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. More red-blood-cells! S. S. S. will build them.

S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

How Phone Plugs Are Constructed

An "Inside View" of This Handy Little Piece of Apparatus.

The construction of a phone plug is an interesting subject in itself to anyone who has not had the opportunity to dissect one.

In the illustration are shown the "insides" of one well-known telephone plug. In the first step in the assembly the phone tip receptacle "E" is fastened to the base of the plug of which "D" is a threaded screw for holding the cover of the plug and "C" is the knurled rim of the plug. "B" is the shank of the plug and "A" is a hard rubber tube.

"Needle" Insulation.

In the second sketch is shown the receptacle "H" for the other phone tip, which is fastened to a steel needle, "F," which is threaded at both ends. An insulating gasket, "G," is placed between the terminal and the base of the plug.

The hard rubber tube is placed on the steel needle to insulate it from the shank of the plug.

In the third sketch the large headed machine screws "I" are mounted in the terminals for holding the phone tips. A fiber gasket is placed on the steel needle and the brass tip of the plug is screwed on.

Tip Construction.

The tip of the phone plug is screwed down tightly, the end of the steel needle cut off and then riveted down over the tip. This construction detail has two very good features in that it prevents the tip from ever becoming loose and coming off, and the end of the steel needle, rather than the soft wearing brass of the tip, is presented where the most frictional wear takes place.

The insulating cover for the plug is next screwed onto the threaded base of the plug "D" and the manufacturing process is complete.

Avoid plugs that have loose tips that can be unscrewed readily, terminals that are insecurely fastened and plugs that use poor insulating materials at "A" and "G."

Pay Especial Attention to Sockets and Tubes

The humble socket, used to hold the vacuum tube and to provide the means of making an electrical contact between the prongs of the tube and the rest of the circuit, receives less attention from the radio fan than it should.

The socket should be carefully scrutinized, for it is at this point that the plate and grid wires and filament leads come very close to each other. If the socket is made of poor insulating material these currents will leak across the base between the binding posts and become lost. The volume and distance of the receiver will suffer. Nothing less than bakelite should be used.

Do not accept a socket made of material that can be easily cut with a knife or will leave a black mark when rubbed across a piece of white paper. Material that will do this has lamp-black in it, which is a very poor insulating substance. As a rule this class of material will melt under the heat of a soldering iron.

Of next importance are the contact springs. Poor contact springs cause a great deal of the noise that is attributed to static. Due to the short distance available on the inside of a socket, and the need for keeping the dimensions of the socket as small as possible, the contact spring must necessarily be short. Due to the shortness of the spring, most of the sockets at present are unsatisfactory because the springs become permanently bent. This requires frequent bending back into their former position so that a good contact can be obtained with the prongs of the tube.

The socket should also be nonmicrophonic. In a receiver which uses ordinary sockets, a loud ring will be heard whenever the set is jarred. Often removing the hand from the tuner dial will be sufficient to cause the tubes to set up this ring.

To cure this many set-builders fasten their sockets on soft rubber sponges to absorb vibration. The chief objection to this method is that if you use screws to hold the socket down to the baseboard or use bus bar wiring to the binding posts, the socket is mechanically connected to the baseboard and the rubber support does not help a great deal in reducing noises.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE BUZZING FLY

Little Melly was ill. She had been in bed for several days and now she was sitting up on the sofa in the living room. She was at that point now when a squeaking door made her feel quite nervous and cross, though she knew she had often left this door half-open, which had blown back and forth in the wind and squeaked.

Then She Sat Up.

There was one door doing this now. It was the door that led into the dining room and it had been 'pulled to' without being latched. Now it blew open quite wide and then almost closed. It acted as though it were going to catch and then just decided to be mean enough not to catch so as to make people nervous.

And as it went back and forth it squeaked.

"Oh, that wretched door," said Melly. "It makes me so nervous."

She didn't feel quite strong enough to get up and close it and just then no one was around to wait on her. Quite often she had left the door just that way and her mother had told her to go back and latch it, for the door was opposite from an open window and the wind almost always did this trick with it whenever it got the chance.

She had never seen any reason for anyone minding it banging a little back and forth, but now it annoyed her most frightfully.

She was really not supposed to get up and close a door for she was wrapped up on the sofa just as though she were in bed.

But at last she couldn't stand the squeaking door any longer and got up and closed it.

She felt a little weak, and the walk, although ordinarily a short one, tired her.

She was glad to get back to the sofa again.

She curled up in the quilt and felt rather pleasantly sleepy.

"I think I'll have a little nap," she said to herself.

"I'm not so sure about that, buzz, buzz," said the fly.

"Oh, dear," said Melly, "first it was the wind and the door squeaking and now you're going to bother me."

"Buzz, buzz," said the fly, not caring in the least.

"I'll just go to sleep in spite of you," said Melly.

"Buzz, buzz," said the fly.

So Melly got into a most comfortable position and pulled the pillow down so her head was lower. She felt deliciously sleepy now. In a moment she would be asleep.

She made up her mind quite firmly on this subject. But of course the fly had had nothing to do with the making up of her mind.

He had not been asked whether he would agree.

Just to show her, it seemed, that he had not been asked, he stepped upon her forehead.

Now, it was one thing to make up one's mind not to be bothered by a fly, and another to have the fly come on one's forehead for a walk.

She brushed the fly away. He buzzed off and came back again.

"Oh, please go away, fly," Melly said.

"Buzz, buzz, buzz," answered the fly. "I don't feel well, fly, and I want to rest. Go away and let me sleep."

"Buzz, buzz, buzz," said the fly.

Then she sat up and tried to swat the fly with a folded paper.

"But every time the fly escaped."

"Haven't you heard me beg you to stop bothering me?" she asked again.

"Buzz, buzz, buzz," replied the fly.

"Oh, dear, oh, dear, don't you understand the English language, you stupid fly?"

"Buzz, buzz, buzz," said the fly.

"Of course you don't," Melly groaned. "You only know fly talk. But I wish more than anything that I knew how to say 'Go-away-fly' in fly language. My, but that would be a help."

"Buzz, buzz, buzz," said the fly.

Liked the Milk

A little five-year-old Chicago boy was visiting in the country and a bowl of bread and milk was given him for supper. He tasted it, then paused to look at it for a moment.

"Don't you like it?" asked his mother.

"Yes, indeed," replied the little fellow. "I was just wishin' our milkman would trade his wagon for a real cow."

If people only knew the facts about their skin

THE real cause of skin trouble—rashes, blackheads, excessive oiliness, etc.—is way down in the lower layers of the skin. It cannot be expected therefore that mere surface remedies can reach the disorder.

Thousands of physicians are daily prescribing Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. They know this gentle, yet effective treatment does sink deep, and will often soothe away in a few days the most stubborn rash as well as a trifling blemish. No home should be without these products—the soap for general toilet use—the ointment to check the first bit of skin eruption. At all druggists.

Ship Without a Rivet

An oil-tanker in one piece, without a rivet in its hull plates or a bolt in its steel frame, the first one ever built in the United States by the electric welding method, was launched recently in Providence, says Popular Science Monthly for April. Terrible heat generated by electricity fused together the sheets of steel and heavy angle iron in the tanker's frame.

MRS. URQUHART GETS REWARD

Mrs. Urquhart of Omaha wants every housewife to share her good fortune in possessing a handsome reward. Here is what she says: "This is the way I did it. I answered an ad by writing for a free 10c bottle of Liquid Veneer and I found it so wonderful for dusting and polishing that I told fifteen of my friends about it and the makers sent me entirely free and postpaid, a great big, beautiful $2.00 Liquid Veneer Polishing Mop." Then Mrs. Urquhart goes on to say: "I am very proud and pleased with the reward given for what I have done, so will take great pleasure in showing it to friends." Twenty thousand of these $2.00 Mops are going to be given away to housewives. Write for a free 10c bottle and ask for descriptive circular 15 telling how easily you, too, may have one of these mops. Address Liquid Veneer Company, Dept. L, Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Oldest Strong Man

J. D. Cameron of Augusta, Maine, asserts he is the world's oldest strong man. Although one hundred years old, he often lifts a barrel of potatoes weighing 100 pounds. Life in the woods for 40 years caused him to be able to preserve his strength, he says.

DOG CARRIES TAG

TELLING GENEROUS FRIENDS OF DIET TREATMENT

A dispatch from Northampton, Mass., states that a local housewife, hearing a mild commotion at the kitchen door, hastened to learn the cause, and admitted a large, hungry collie dog. She welcomed and fed the visitor.

A few minutes after the collie sauntered away with a grateful look in his eyes, she heard more noise at the door. She again received the visitor, who on this occasion was a short, fat bulldog. She was about to feed him when she noticed a tag on his collar. Out of curiosity she read it. The tag said, "Do not feed me, I am trying to reduce."

CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill all the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill all the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

KEEPING WELL

THE AUTOMOBILE AS A HEALTH DANGER

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THE automobile is a great advance in methods of human transportation. But like all advances, it has some disadvantages. So rapidly have the manufacture and general use of the automobile developed, that we have not yet had time to realize its dangers and to protect ourselves from them. Just as in the early days of the railroad, before safety devices and protective measures had time to develop, many lives were lost, so the early years of the automobile are costing many lives which could be saved.

The first danger, of course, is to the drivers and pedestrians. In 1921, the United States census bureau reported 13,000 deaths for that year. The number for 1924 will probably be much higher, from eighteen to twenty thousand. This appalling loss of life can only be lowered by better and more carefully guarded roads, greater care on the part of drivers and greater caution and watchfulness on the part of pedestrians.

A growing danger is that from the carbon monoxide in automobile exhaust gases. Hardly a daily paper now which does not record one or more deaths from this cause. Owners and drivers of automobiles must learn that it is highly dangerous to run an automobile engine in a small closed garage. Keep the doors and windows of the garage open until you have stopped your engine. The exhaust from even a small car can overcome you in about three minutes.

What special dangers to workers in automobile factories, battery factories, repair shops and garages are we do not know. Another health danger is that too many of us are riding too much and walking too little. This means too much fat, especially among the well-to-do and middle-aged. Fat causes diabetes, Bright's disease and heart disease.

Lastly, anything which increases travel increases the spread of disease. Diseases are carried from one place to another by infected people. The role of the automobile in the spread of disease is an important sanitary problem which must be studied and solved. (© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

ALLEGRETTO

By Winifred Davidson

How everything was singing low
When Time went through the world today!
The summer grasses hummed as though
They knew no hour for ripening hay.
Each tree-top crooning swayed a nest;
Young larks rose piping wild halloo;
And tuneful on their wildflower quest
Small girls and boys ran woodward too.

How laughter found a hundred ways
To ripple down the fields of morn!
Breezes amused the sunbeam fays
Low-laughing with the laughing corn.
Blown elms stood shaking in a ring,
So smiled and laughed the day of mirth—
The sea and every other thing—
Time almost lost his way through earth.

CHARMING SPORTS SWEATER; WIDE BRIMS ARE POPULAR

WITH the scene all set of green fields, clear running streams, inviting equestrian paths, apple blossoms and sunshine overhead, violets and crocus beneath, springtime keeps calling "Come out into the great outdoors," adding a precautionary word, "but do not forget your sweater." Not that the true sportswoman need be reminded of the importance of her sweater. It enters as essentially into the planning of her fresh air campaign as does tennis racket, golf ball and fishing rod.

In regard to the ideal sports sweater fashion says "it must denote smartdour blue. Gray is also written boldly on fashion's ledger.

Rumor becomes fact as far as the larger hat is concerned. No longer is the little chapeau to hold undisputed sway in the realm of fashion. The wide brim has arrived and claims right to share in the millinery honors of the day.

The popular broad brim at the moment is wider at the sides than the front and back, sometimes the back having no brim at all. These almost give the impression of a bonnet, wide of brim and tall of crown. As summer advances big picturesque shapes ness"; commonsense cautions "it must be practical"—and that exactly describes the regulation sports sweater model for spring and summer 1925 as illustrated in the picture herewith. Note how perfectly this little fisherman is appareled in snugly tailored sweater knitted of alpaca, with knickers and woolen hose fashioned correctly even unto the minutest detail. Printer's ink falls short of conveying the charming sunset brown called "lariat" in styledom's dictionary, which is the color of sweater and hose, for, nowadays, to be in fashion, stockings must match the knitted jacket. Well might the four roomy pockets of which this sweater boasts excite the envy of of every type will be worn with chiffon and lace frocks. These will be in exquisite pastel shades. The favorite for immediate wear is the bangkok shape.

An item of very special interest is that they are trimming these bangkok shapes with velvet, either yardage-cut or velvet ribbon; also bright-colored facings are in use. One notes many of the wider straw or bangkok brims are velvet bound.

Fuchsia and magenta are leading millinery shades. Many of the large roses which trim the big pokes now so fashionable indicate this color trend. Silken roses of this shade, with decorative stems and foliage, beautify the average small boy who knows how necessary are pockets to one's convenience when en route on a day's or week-end's outing.

Having acquired a proper regulation sports sweater, such as described, one's fancy lightly turns to sweaters of more fanciful mood, for 'tis the manner of our modern knitted outerwear designers to tempt the woman of fashion with "a sweater for every occasion."

The newest type among sweaters is the jabot slipon. This consists of an exquisitely knit sweater either of silk or light wool with a cascade or jabot of self construction draped from neck to hem at one side of the front.

Art silk jumpers embroidered in contrasting color or self shade present themselves in alluring new colors, chief among which is madonna, and pompa-the silk-covered hat shown center to the left in the group pictured here. The new large poke effect is defined in that youthful model above to the left in this picture. The crushed sash about the crown is of wide silver ribbon.

The short-back of present favor is defined in the chapeau above to the right. An ostrich fancy trims it effectively.

When summer comes, the picturesque lacy tuscan straw body hat which concludes this group of "wide brims" will be in its glory, for it registers as the type of millinery forecast to accompany sheer dainty frocks.

Considerable interest centers in beige hair hats for ensuing months. JULIA BOTTOMLEY, (c) 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

SOAP AND WATER NEEDED FOR CLEANING

Pipe Rigged Up in Kitchen of Virginia Farm Home Insures Abundant Supply of Hot Water.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Plenty of soap and water are of course taken for granted in connection with any cleaning work. At the same time it is true that in rural homes there is not always an adequate water system; either from a failure to realize the importance of an abundant supply of water piped through the house, and a good drainage system for carrying away waste—or because of an idea that a water system would cost too much, a very large number of farm housewives do not have this essential convenience. There are a number of simple, inexpensive water systems possible to the farm home, and anyone interested can get information about them by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Hot water helps to loosen dirt and is a great satisfaction for many household purposes, but for cleaning it is more likely to injure finishes and fabrics than lukewarm or cold water.

Water should not be allowed to stand on floors or woodwork nor to get into cracks or seams; it should be used very sparingly and in most cases wiped off at once.

Soap solutions are useful for making suds quickly. They clean more evenly and safely than soap in cake form. A quantity may be made at a time, and bits of soap may be used up in this way. The proportion is one pound of soap to three quarts of water, heated slowly until the soap is dissolved. Flaked and chipped soaps dissolve more quickly than cake soap. Hard cake soap may be chipped at home by being rubbed over a grater.

Soap may be made at home from lye and waste fat, and the directions given on the lye container will generally be found satisfactory. Homemade soaps, however, are likely to contain free alkali, and should be used with caution, especially on delicate and colored fabrics, and on paint, varnish or other finishes.

STOVE MOP USEFUL IN CLEANING STOVE

Device Is Quite Convenient and Saves Hands.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The outside of all stoves should be wiped frequently with a cloth, soft paper, or cotton waste. Grease may be washed off with soap and water. Rubbing the stove with a soft, thick cloth moistened with a few drops of kerosene or light lubricating oil will keep it in good condition, though not polished. For cookstoves especially, many housekeepers consider this sufficient and prefer it to blacking, because substances spilled can be more easily washed off, and flatirons and the bottoms of kettles are cleaner than if stove polish is carelessly used. The stove mop illustrated is very convenient and saves the housekeeper's hands.

Stove Mop Makes Cleaning Easy.

It was made from an old butter paddle and a small piece of sheepskin by a woman in Wythe county, Virginia, as one of the many ingenious improvements in her kitchen, entered in the county "better-kitchen" contest. The photograph was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Nickel trimmings on stoves should be cleaned like other nickel by washing them frequently with hot soapy water and drying them with soft cloth or paper which will usually keep them in good condition. Whiting or some other fine scourer may sometimes be used to brighten nickel that has become dull.

Coal and wood stoves should be cleaned inside frequently and thoroughly, in order to save heat and fuel. Ashes should be removed every day, and once a week the soot should be brushed from the bottom of the lids. All flues should be cleaned regularly, especially those under and on top of the oven, through which hot air must circulate to heat it.

When the burners on gas stoves become clogged, they should be taken out, brushed, placed in a large pan, and boiled in water to which washing soda has been added in the proportion of one-half pound to one gallon, rinsed and brushed, wiped with paper or cotton waste, fitted back in the stove, and dried thoroughly by lighting the gas. The tray under the burners should be removed and washed frequently.

The burners and chimneys on oil or other liquid-fuel stoves should be kept in order in the same way as kerosene lamps. In most cases the burners are detachable, and when they become clogged may be cleaned like those on gas stoves.

The heating elements on electric stoves may be cleaned with water and a soft brush. Any particles burned to char may be brushed out.

Cleaning Materials Are Most Needed in Spring

Even for housecleaning on a small scale several kinds of cleaning materials are needed to put things in shipshape. Farmers' Bulletin 1180 of the United States Department of Agriculture describes them all in detail, but the following are the most important:

Neutral soap, that is, one with no free alkali, and plenty of hot water are the most useful of all dirt chasers, or detergents. In this connection it is well to remember that a soap solution makes suds more quickly and cleans more evenly and safely than soap in cake. It especially pays to use up small pieces of soap in this way.

A stronger detergent such as ammonia, borax, or sal-soda (washing soda), is generally needed for loosening the dirt that soap and water will not remove. These alkalis, however, are likely to be injurious to colors and finishes and must be applied with caution.

A scourer, or abrasive, is also indispensable in housecleaning. For rubbing up silver, nickel, and other soft polished metals, fine whiting (paris white) or rouge should be provided. While for zinc, iron, steel, and aluminum, a harsher material, such as bath brick or steel wool, is more satisfactory.

A bleaching agent of some sort is generally needed for taking iron rust stains from the white-enamelled bathtub and lavatory or from some wood surfaces. Oxalic acid is good for this purpose.

A furniture polish for restoring the luster to furniture and woodwork is also necessary. A simple kind that gives satisfactory results can be made at home by mixing 1 part raw linseed oil with 2 parts turpentine and adding a little melted beeswax, if desired.

Community Building

Finer School Buildings Is Universal Demand

The little old red schoolhouse is dropping off into obscurity. Like the hickory stick of the Three R's days, it is becoming but a ghost of the dim past.

"Modern progress," says the Indiana Limestone Quarrymen's association, "is sweeping before it the flimsy shells that once housed armies of tiny Americans. These claptrap structures, cold, unsanitary and at best poor fire risks, are rapidly being replaced by sturdy modern buildings."

"A survey just completed shows that during the year 1924 more than $225,000,000 was expended in replacing antiquated school buildings."

"Plans have been adopted and contracts already awarded indicate that the present year will show a still greater volume of school building construction. Beauty in architecture is being combined with utilization."

"Community interest and civic pride are in a measure responsible for the stride toward better school buildings. More and more schools are becoming community centers as well as temples of wisdom. Space for assemblies and recreation purposes are now almost a first consideration."

"Waste of space was a characteristic of many old school buildings. By judicious architecture, it has been estimated, $50,000,000 could be saved, the chief economies being in the reduction of waste space on stairs and corridors and the increase in usable area."

"The future will see finer school buildings with better facilities and at a lower cost to the taxpayer."

Old Schoolhouse Now a Community Center

One little red schoolhouse in Vermont has been transformed into a lively center of community co-operation, according to the statement of the superintendent of schools in Poultney, made to the Interior department, bureau of education. This schoolhouse was lacking in attractiveness and in the conveniences and equipment needed by a modern rural school until 1922, when a parent-teacher association was organized. Things began to happen as soon as the men and women of the community became interested in the school. Money was raised for necessary equipment. Fourteen men with four teams in the school district had a "bee" one Saturday afternoon which resulted in regading the school grounds. The people opened their homes and raised money in various ways for further improvements. The teacher co-operated with the women in their efforts to raise money.

The school is now rated a "standard school," but the Red Schoolhouse Parent-Teacher association will continue to work until a "superior" name plate has been placed on the building.

"Go-Getter" Wins

There is but one sure way to get what one wants, and that is to go after it and to go with such determination that obstacles to attainment will be removed. This is as true of towns and communities as of men. If a town wishes another industry it will get it much more quickly by going after it with some definite and attractive offer than by waiting for the industry to come seeking location. If a town needs a new hotel, as Albertville did, the quickest way to get one is to do as Albertville did. It is the "go-getter" that gets results and the town that needs a hotel, an industry, a bank or a larger population must be a "go-getter" if it hopes to secure the thing desired. Albertville has pointed the way to many small Alabama cities. —Anniston (Ala.) Star.

Our Little Town

There are fancier towns than our little burg. There are towns that are bigger than this. But folks that live here in our little town Don't know of the pleasures they miss. And so we're contented to live on right here. Nor worry o'er things of the West, Or the East or the North or the South, whatsoever For we know our own town is the best. —Kansas City Star.

People Make Community

Tuscaloosa is a better city in many ways than the average. It is not fine buildings, broad streets nor educational opportunities—but the people make a community, and it's the spirit that counts. Co-operative efforts will bring any city into prominence and establish it permanently in its rightful place in the sun.—Tuscaloosa News.

March of Improvement

Formerly the first impression a visitor got on arriving and the last one he took away with him on leaving was one of squalor, because the town dump lay across the main approach to the village. Today the land where the dump stood is the property of the civic club. Old shacks have been removed from it and refuse cleared away. It has been leveled and planted to grass, flowers and trees. It is spanned by gravel walks and surrounded by ornamental lighting standards.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE LARKS ARE SINGING

TO THOSE hopeful individuals who keep their gaze on the towers of Utopia, glinting like gold in the far-off dreamy distance, give thought to the golden rule and put its fine precepts into actual practice, the larks are always singing.

These humans have their trials and difficulties, "even as you and I" but with them all, they manage to wear a smile of content.

They go about their duties, however discouraging they may seem, with a cheerfulness that gives inspiration to the discontented and fault-finding souls, frequently losing their way and falling in the mire of despair.

They know intuitively when to speak and when to curb their tongues, for they have learned the most difficult of all arts, the art of self-control, which the venerable sages will tell you is the first stepping-stone to worldly success and an enduring happiness.

Hope never deserts them even in their darkest hours.

She holds her blazing torch over her head and bids them follow.

So the gloom of somber night is transformed to day, and the trusting disciples move from place to place, confident of their ability to find their way to the hills where the larks are singing and the sky is forever light with glorious sunlight.

The world owes a debt of gratitude to these optimistic people which it never can pay, and you and I being a part of the world, are likewise delinquent and possibly thoughtless of our constantly increasing obligation.

We are too self-centered, too greedy for gain, too faithless.

We brush aside the weak in our pursuit of earthly dross and trample them under our hasty feet, never stopping to look back to see whether we have hurt them. We forget that we all are of one flesh, and if we have injured them, we have injured ourselves.

Every day the wise Keeper of the Book of Life is calling on some debtor to blot out his or her delinquencies, always hanging over his or her head until the account is paid in full.

If you have canceled your obligation and kept the faith, the day of reckoning will have no terrors, for you will find you are as free and happy as the larks singing in gladness all about you when the dawning is rosy and the air is fragrant with the scent of flowers.

Thomas Jefferson died just 50 years after he signed the Declaration of Independence.

AS TOLD BY Irvin S. Cobb

FIXING BLAME AT ITS SOURCE

THIS little story has one merit, at least. Of my own personal knowledge I can testify that it is true.

A tired business man in New York, coming home after a particularly enervating day, had occasion, or thought he had, to speak sharp words of reproof to his eight-year-old son. He wound up by sending the youngster to bed without any supper.

That night, stealing into the youngster's room to see whether he had fallen asleep, his mother found him wide awake and very scornful of her advances.

"Why, Jackie," she said, "you shouldn't be sulky toward me just because your father scolded you. I'm not to blame."

"Yes, you are too!" stated Jackie. "You married the big stiff, and now I got to stand for him!"

SCHOOL DAYS

Your Last Name

IS IT HERRICK?

THIS name has been traced to a first name used in Anglo-Saxon days—Heric, which is connected with Eric and also with Richard, both coming from a word meaning king or prince.

One thing is certain and that is that Herrick is thoroughly English and that it is a very old surname. In this country the Herricks were among the early settlers. Henry Herrick, a native of Leicester, England, settled in Salem in 1620. He was the son of Sir William Herrick of Bean Manor, Leicester. The name seems to be most usual in Leicestershire, England, which was apparently the cradle of the Herricks, and the name is spelled in countless different ways in the old records there. Hericke and Heyrick were usually employed methods in old days and are still used by some of the English families.

Among the distinguished descendants of Henry Herrick, the colonist, were John Herrick, educator, who was president of the University of South Dakota and the Pacific University of Oregon; D. Cady Herrick, prominent jurist; Ebenezer, who was representative from Maine at Washington before the Civil war; Joshua H., also Maine representative, and Samuel Herrick, representative from New York.

In England there was an interesting old family of goldsmiths of the name. Sometimes they spelled it Hericke, sometimes Herrick and sometimes Heyrick. Sir William Herrick or Hericke, born in 1562, was the fifth son of John Heyrick or Eyricke of Leicester, who undoubtedly belonged to the same connection to which the colonist, Henry Herrick, belonged. Sir William Herrick was a money lender who won favor with kings and nobles. A son of his named Richard Herrick, born in 1600, was warden of Manchester Collegiate church, and a nephew was Sir Robert Herrick, born in 1591, well-known English poet. His father was Nicholas Herrick, brother of Sir William Herrick, also a goldsmith.

The poet, Herrick, a contemporary of Shakespeare, wrote some charming songs. Among them are:

Gather ye rosebuds while ye may,
Old time is still a-flying,
—and
Cherry ripe, ripe, ripe, I cry,
Full and fair ones—come and buy!

Get back that lost weight!

WHEN you start to waste away to a shadow, when the color leaves your cheeks and your poor, tired legs will hardly hold up your weakened body it's high time you started taking a fine tonic and builder like Tanlac.

Tanlac will build you up and make you feel that life's worth living. Made from roots, herbs and bark gathered from the four corners of the Earth and compounded under the exclusive Tanlac formula, Tanlac is just what the poor, starved body needs.

First of all it cleanses the blood stream and puts the digestive organs in order. You find, after a few days' treatment, that you want to eat. Pretty soon the welcome color steals back into your cheeks and the scales tell you that you're gaining weight. From then on it's only a short time until you're feeling fit as a fiddle.

Millions of men and women have taken Tanlac with great benefit. More than one hundred thousand people have written us glowing tributes to this wonderful tonic.

Mr. Scott of the S. D. Telephone Company gave a short talk on the question of City service and tolls.

We feel confident that his company will co-operate with us in the near future, and because of the fast growth of our community it seems imperative that each resident have their phone at the nominal toll charge for cities. We will continue to work for a branch office and exchange of our own, giving us city rates and in place of the old-fashioned country service and long distance toll now charged.

A splendid program of entertainment was given by Mrs. Josephine Schultz and her committee in charge as follows: Piano duet, by Miss Greer and Miss Martin; Vocal solo by Mrs. W. S. Hunt, accompanied by Mrs. Farrar; Reading by Mrs. Walters; Vocal solo by Ed Beale, by special request.

We wish to compliment Mrs. W. S. Hunt especially on her lovely portrayal of Cadman's, "At Dawning." Mrs. Farrars contralto accompaniment in the chorus of "I Love You" (also sung as encore by Mrs. Hunt) was greatly appreciated and we hope to hear more of her voice at our next program.

Mrs. Walters own poem entitled "Mission Beach" which she recited for us, was greatly applauded.

Each entertainer was vastly appreciated and a unanimous vote of thanks is extended from the committee to those who participated. After this, coffee and home made cake were served and enjoyed by all.

The evening ended all too soon with a jolly dance, until one by one the crowd dispersed to their various home by the sea.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. England, proprietors of the Mission Beach garage have just returned from a week visit with friends in Frisco.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hunt of Ostend court have as their guest for the week, their son, Mr. Glen E. Hunt, from Berkeley.

Cabrillo Honored

This resolution was lost—turned down by the finance committee, but was referred by that committee to the land marks committee. The San Diego delegates met with this latter committee. Hermann Lichtenberger chairman, and a new resolution was drafted asking for $2000 to be taken from the per capita tax for a period of five years, the money to be available when the S. D. parlor had raised the sum of $40,000.

Now, this resolution had been first presented Monday, and had been referred to the Landmarks committee. Tuesday night there was a big public meeting in San Bernardino at which members of the chamber of commerce and other important citizens were present. An old pioneer was on the program and alluded to the efforts of the San Diego delegation in the matter of having the memory of Cabrillo honored by a suitable monument erected on the spot where first his eyes beheld California ground. This speaker strongly recommended that the proposition be carried through—a wonderfully eloquent appeal, and the San Diego delegates felt that it was this appeal that put the resolution through. They met with the landmarks committee and the finance committee, the resolution was re-drafted but on Friday morning it met with opposition from the incoming grand president, the Honorable Fletcher Cutler, who felt that it was almost too big a proposition for the grand parlor to help finance. The members of the landmarks committee then took the floor among the speakers was Ed Dowell who made an eloquent plea and the proposition carried with an enthusiastic flourish—unanimously.

Merrill Gage, who recently spent some time looking over the historic spots in and about San Diego, and who is fully alive to the need for appropriate markers, was a late contestant in the submitting of architectural plans for the Cabrillo monument. When Edgar Hastings arrived in San Bernardino he found this young artist's tentative plans hastily sent to him there at the last moment. The monument as suggested by Mr. Gage will consist of a white shaft rising 170 feet and surmounted by a bronze statue of the bold Portuguese. The shaft will contain a spiral staircase leading to a lookout from which the most magnificent view in the world will be obtained. It will be illuminated by base flood lights and will be an unmistakable landmark for the mariner far out at sea.

The local committee appointed for the securing of no less than $100,000 for the erection of this monument consists of A. P. Johnson, Claus Spreckels, Carl Heilbron, Frank A. Frye, Eugene Daney, jr., Morton Fowler, Dan E. Shaffer, Virgil Brusch, sr., Ed Head, Joseph Foster, Bert Levi, Lewis J. Utt, Edgar F. Hastings, Wilbur Kelley, Albert Mayrhofer, Henry A. Stelling, Milton Sessions, Daniel Feeler, Ed Crolie, John T. Millan, Fred A. Rhodes, Fred Heilbron, Don M. Stewart, Edgar A. Luce and Rufus Choate, and of the Native Daughters, Miss Adele Keep, Mrs. Elsie Case, Miss Marion Stough, Miss Gladys Chandler, Miss Catherine Woods and Mrs. Jane Florentine.

Modern Banking and How it Has Changed From Pre-War Days

DID YOU ever stop to think of the protection a checking account with your bank affords you? If you have, probably you limited your idea to the fact that the bank has big and strong vaults and that there is always some one on guard to watch and protect its contents from robbers and thieves.

But the amount of money that is stolen and lost through bank robberies is small compared with the vast sum that are lost in other ways and through frauds which have no element of violence in them. The Humboldt Bank of San Francisco has compiled a number of rules to protect its customers against such frauds and here are some of its suggestions which are as applicable to any other bank in the country:

Never write with a pencil, always use ink. Fill in all blank spaces. Write the amount of the check as near as possible the left hand end of the line placed on the check for that purpose. If you place the amount too far from that end it is possible that another amount may be placed before the one you have written, and thus for instance, a check that you made out for fifty dollars may be made out for five hundred and as a rule are strangers, and it warns its customers not to endorse checks for strangers, and never to give a stranger a blank check.

Humboldt Bank calls attention very important fact, that while us are not all crooks, crooks

The bank also points out that checks payable to "cash" or "bearer" should be presented by the drawer and not handed around, as any one can cash them. The importance too, of not leaving cancelled checks where any one can pick them up, or of throwing slips with your signature, or spoiled checks into the waste paper basket at the bank, is emphasized as crooks are often watching for just such data to enable them to duplicate your signature on a forged check.

Check books should not be left lying around; they may prove a great help to those who are trying to forge checks against their owners. The bank also urges to be careful of "certified" checks and checks marked "O. K." The certification stamp and the "O. K." endorsement are easily duplicated.

The Humboldt Bank and the other members of the American Bankers' Association are carrying on a national wide campaign against frauds in the banking business and have issued a booklet entitled "Stepping Ahead of the Bank Crook," which explains fully how to protect your checking account. The pamphlet will be mailed to you if you write to the Humboldt Bank requesting it.

PERMISSION ASKED

FOR DESTRUCTION OF SEALS

IN MISSION BAY

A committee of prominent San Diego sportsmen asked the city council this week for permission to eradicate a colony of seals in Mission Bay that has been destroying fine fish by thousands. It is said that one seal will slaughter a ton of fish a day, killing and mutilating the fish that it does not eat. The seals in the bay are valueless for exhibition purposes and the petition for their destruction has been referred to City Manager Fred Rhodes, who will very likely grant the following petitioners the right to rid the bay of the seal colony: Phil A. Barney, T. A. Rife, H. B. Frisbie, Adolph Huelheisen, Harry Snell, H. J. Lewis and Charles Burlock.

BOY SCOUTS TO

PARTICIPATE IN PARADE

MEMORIAL DAY

Every scout in San Diego is expected to be in uniform Saturday, May 30, to take part in the Memorial day parade.

It is planned to have scouts patrol the line of march and fall in in the rear of the marching column as the parade passes.

It is the opinion of the commissioner's staff that no scout will be permitted to take part in the Memorial day parade unless he is in full scout uniform. The uniform for this council is hat, shirt, neckerchief, breeches and socks. Coats are not worn.
